

Why did Guterres visit Lesotho?

His two-day trip to neighboring Lesotho, a small landlocked mountainous kingdom, will also see him visit the Katse Dam, an integral part of the country's plans to harness its water reserves. A focus of Guterres' visit has been the money poor nations in Africa and elsewhere need to deal with the impact of a warming planet.

Why is Lesotho a national disaster?

Southern Africa is in the grip of one of its worst droughts, triggering a hunger crisis that has affected more than 27 million people, according to the U.N. Lesotho is one of several countries to declare national disasters because of the drought's devastating impact on crops.

Does OCHA Support Lesotho?
